Terrible Fall-Death

About I o'clock last evening a terrible aecident occurred at the city hospital, which has since resulted in death. Barney Potter, a earpenter, was on the roof tim bers of the eastern end of the extension, when his footing missed, and he fell between the rafters head first and struck face down upon the floor timbers of the fourth story, a distance of about twenty feet. When taken up it was found that one of his eyes was utterly destroyed, the bone of the nose was crushed flat, both cheek bones broken, one jaw broken, and a great gash cut under the jaw. He was removed to a ward in the hospital, and his wounds dressed. About six o'clock his wife and brother-in-law, having been informed, removed him to his residence on Shelby street, between Marshall and Walnut. Dr. Metcalfe was called in, and did all that could be done to relieve his sufferings, but his internal injuries were so severe that at one o'clock this morning he died. Mr. Potter was a German, had been in this city about a year, coming from Cincinnati here. He had only yesterday begun to work on the hospital. He was about forty years old, and leaves a wife, but no children.

HORRIBLE INDIAN MASSACRE.

Four Men Mundered and Scalped Near Fort Boford—The Victions—Who they Were, and How they Died. From the Sioux City Journal, Sept. 16th. We, yesterday, had a call from Major Wilkinson, who, for six years prior to the first of the present mouth, was Indian Agent at Forts Buford and Berthold. the date mentioned he turned over the agency to Capt. Clifford. We are indebted to Major Wilkinson for a correct statement of a terrible outrage perpetrated by Indians near Fort Buford, 10th of August. The Major, in company with Charles

Larpenter, a trader at Buford, and the latter's wife and three children, arrived at Buford on the 11th of August, the day atter the occurrence of the scene we are about to narrate. About eight miles from the fort a having party, composed of twenty men, were at work. The hay being put up is on Gov-ernment contract, which Capt. Anderson is filling, Capt. Payne being in charge of the working party, though not at the time

The men were well armed, in expectation of trouble, many of them having guns strapped to their backs as they worked. During the day, just at what time we do not know, about forty Indians, of the Uncpapa band, made a vigorous attack upon the party. The men were fully prepared and made effective resistance, driving the redskins from the field. The Indians captured one horse: but a fine animal taker y the whites more than made up the loss. As soon as the attack was made, the Not long before, a party of four men, Peter S. Dugan, Adam Jones, James Melain and Joseph Araldo, had left the fort in a wagon, drawn by a mule and a horse, to go to the hay-field for hay. Firing was distinctly heard at the for and by the haying party, about two miles from the fort. When the vicinity was reached by the haying party, a sickening scene was presented.

The four men were found dead, two of them stark naked, the others partially tripped, and all sealped and horribly min Three of them were close togeth r, and the fourth was about forty rod distant, evidently having run as far as he could and being the last to fall. The In-dians had made off with the mule and horse, as well as the clothing and personal effects of the men, leaving the wagon. The indications were that the fight had een desperate. The men were armed, and that they used their weapons the bodies of two dead Indians, together with the number of exploded cartridges found well attested. Bloody arrows were picked ip, which the men had evidently rom their bodies with their own hands one man had thirteen arrows shot into and received two other severe wounds

When the firing was heard, a party rom the fort set out for the scene, but did not reach the ground until after the hay

At the fort, at the time, were about twelve hundred Assinnebone Indians, who were there to receive supplies. A number of them repaired to the battle ground, and there took possession of the bodies of the two dead Indians, whom they scalped and otherwise disfigured in a horrible manner with their kuives.

Lieut. Townsend, with a guard of men, followed the trail of the retreating Indians to the river, a distance of two miles, where the savages had crossed over, and render-ed further pursuit out of the question. There are only thirty-five soldiers on duty t Buford. Judging by the trail, the In lians numbered about seventy-five.

fwo Women Who Didu't Know Their Mother—An "Unknown" Decently Buried. From the New York Herald, 19th.

That there is nothing certain in this world, is a maxim of common occupation; but there are some things of which people are reasonably sure. The wise child who would he sitate to name father could searce ly be expected to have any doubts cor cerning his maternal relative. But a Mysterious case is furnished by Werden Bren nan, which goes to show that a woma an be mistaken even in her own mother On the 9th instant, the police found at 32 Cherry street, and conveyed to the morgue, the body of an unknown woman, who was supposed to have been murdered. Her skull was fractured as if by a blunt instrument. An inquest was held on the ody, but was adjourned to Monday for

On the day of the funeral, Monday last, a number of the friends of the late Mrs. McCaffrey looked at the corpse in company with the two women named, and recognizing the feauures, bade it a last adieu. The circum stance of the murder drew a large con course to the funeral, which was quite imposing. The relatives went home after wards to mourn, and the friends to specu late on the shortness of life and the fre quency of mysterious murders. It was an xciting topic and was not exhausted until the next day, when, to the astonishment of all, Mrs. McCaffrey walked into the house where her daughters were, tartly inquired what they were "blubbering inquired about," tucked up her sleeves and went to work as usual, and just as if she had never been murdered, dead and buried. daughters don't know what to make of the matter, and the numerous friends of McCaffrey are lost in astonishment. It will be recollected that last May great excitement prevailed in Ninth street, French Garden Hill, arising from very extraordinary occurrences that were transpiring at Mr. Chiles' residence.

The street bell was rung constantly by nseen hands. Stones were thrown at and vindows broken in Mr. Chiles' house, when no human being was in sight. Th furniture in the house was disarranged and turned topsy-turvy. Neither time nor oney were spared in the effort to find the key to the mystery, but all in vain. Finally, Colouel Egbert, Chief of Police. ogether with Detectives Parker and Tyer, visited the premises, and, after a thorough investigation, arrested Mrs. Baggett as the guilty party. Mrs. Baggett solemnly asseverated her innocence, but said that she knew who did it-that "it was done by the dead;" and this remarkable statement she repeated to the Mayor, and still adheres to. For the defense Mr. Baggett, Miss Baggett and Mr. Davis swore that they saw the bell ring and stones thrown at Mr. Chiles' house when Mrs. Baggett was in her own house, or standing by them, and when no human being was in sight.

Mr. Chiles testified that he saw Mrs Baggett early one morning in her garden pick up something and put it in her aprou, but this was explained by Mr. Baggett, who stated that it was Corpus Christi morning (27th of May), and that his mother was gathering flowers with which to decorate the Catholic Church. On cross-examination by Mr. Moise, Mr. Chiles admitted that the furniture in the house was disarranged, when it was impossible for Mrs. Baggett to have had access thereto. Upon being questioned by Colonel Jenkins as to whether his suspicions fell upon any one, Mr. Baggett said that he believed that everything was lone-bell-ringing, stone-throwing, &c., by a supernatural means. Colonel Jenkins asked Mr. Baggett whether it was not against the tenets of the Catholic religion to believe in ghosts? To which Mr. Baggett replied that it was, but he could not help his belief, and that he was conscientiously of the opinion that no human hands rang the bell or threw the stone at Mr. Chiles' house. Mr. Baggett was about one hour in giving his testi mony. He was listened to with marked and respectful attention by the court, jury and a crowded court-house. A Jealons Husband Attempts to Kill his Father-in-Law, and Then Murders his Wife.

The locality known as the "Bush in the sually quiet town of North Bridgewater, Mass., was thrown into a great state of ex eitement last evening by the action of a man named James Armstrong, who came near perpetrating a double murder. He attempted to shoot his father-in-law, an l, failing in that, he deliberately shot his wife dead with a revolver. The facts in the case, as near as they can be ascertained at the hour of writing, are as follows: seems that for some months there had been trouble in the house of the Armtrongs, which kind words or a compro mise of differences, founded in jealousy could not be amicably settled, and last evening, about eight o'clock, all the parties mixed up in the family broil met together. Armstrong, who is an Englishman, and about twenty-five years of age, met his father-in-law at his house which soon resolved themselves into anger accompanied by threats. Both parties without any intification or warning whatever, drew a revolver and aimed it father-in-law, discharging its contents before any resistance could be made. ended for, and struck a man named Jas. Welsh, slightly wounding him in the eheek. Armstrong turned pa around, his wife standing near the outside of the house, and deliberately fired at her. The ball lodged in her neck, completely severing the jugular vein, causing her death in less than five minutes.—N. Y. Herald, 18th.
